

The Girl
and
the

RAINBOW!

written: by:

Kristen:
Grace:
Eary.

once a pon a time, there was a girl. Her name was Hannah.

Then one day, it had starring raining. the girl was very, unhappy.
she put on her rain things and went outside.

Then as soon as me mom
called her, she had to eat dinner.

Then
bed.

she was tucked

into

Then when she was getting ready for school, she looked out the window, gess she wet she a betiful rainbow. saw?

The End!

License Terms for "The Girl and the Rainbow"

Written and Illustrated by Kristen Grace Eary

- You are allowed to make and use as many non-profit photo or electronic copies of the story that you want as long as you obey the following rules:
 - You must copy the whole document in its entirety including this license page
 - You may not alter this document or this associated license page in any way or create derivative works
 - You may not charge money for the distribution of this document
 - You may not use the document in any manner that would bring dishonor or disgrace to the author or her/his immediate family
 - You may not use the document in any manner that would dishonor or persecute any race, gender, religion, ethnic group or any other protected category
 - You understand that the respective licensees of this document reserve the right to modify any future licensees that might apply to this document as necessary
- If you are interested in preparing derivative works or using said document for any reason other than described above, please contact ConservativeArt to negotiate fair and reasonable licensing

www.conservativeArt.net

“Share with God’s people who are in need.
Practice hospitality.” - Romans 12:13 NIV